Mr. Coke argued against the constitutional right of Congress to delegate its delegate its delegate its delegate of the constitutional argument on the question and gave his support to the bill.

Mr. Eustis said that the question presented by the bill under discussion was a very perplexing one. On the one hand large property interests were represented, and on the other hand there was encountered a strong moral sentiment in countered a strong moral sentiment is countered a strong moral sentiment in one or two or more States. The difficulty in the question arose in the attempt to reconcile the conflict between the rights of property, under the constitution and laws, and that moral sentiment known as prohibition. The pending bill could not become a law with the help of his vote. He was a State's Rights Democrat of the strictest sect, and was in lavor of the States exercising to an unlimited extent the rights which they had reserved. But the powers which they had lodged in the Federal Government, and lodged wisely, he wanted the Federal Government to exercise exclusively.

Mysterious Death of an Ex-Philadelphian in an English Hotel.

New York, May 27.—The following special, from Margate, Eng., was published here to-day:

There was a commotion at the Cliftonville Hotel on Sunday, caused by the sudden death of Major Megrue, formerly of Philadelphia, and of late years a compround. There is intense excitement in the business center exclusively, and the ice house was allowed to burn to the ground. There is intense excitement

An Old Countryman Robbert, An Old Countryman Robbert.

An old farmer came to the ct. y yesterday on the steamer Courier to do some shopping. He visited several atores and bought clothing and other bulky articles, and returning to the boat, left his bundles on a chair and went to the upper deck. When he came back his bundles were all gone. They were worth a good deal, and the man had spent all his money. Search for the missing goods was in vain, and the farmer returned home empty handed and empty pocketed.

Marshall County Oil Field.

There is nothing new at the oil well on the Hicks farm, in the Moundsville field. Drilling is still progressing as rapidly as possible. The well at Cameron is pronounced dry, and the flow of gas obtained will be tested to ascertain it is strong enough to supply the town.
